

PART III — THE PROMISE

Visakhapatnam — Feeding and Searching

 00:00 - 00:08 बच्चो... आज मैं आपको एक कहानी सुनाना चाहता हूँ... लेकिन ये किसी किताब की कहानी नहीं है... ये मेरी अपनी जिंदगी की सच्ची कहानी है।	 00:08 - 00:18 एक दिन, रोज़ की तरह मैं जानवरों को खाना खिला रहा था... तभी मेरी नज़र एक बच्ची पर पड़ी।	 00:18 - 00:28 उसकी एक टांग नहीं थी... और उसे infection भी था। मैं चाहता था कि उसका इलाज हो... उसे अच्छी देखभाल मिले।
 00:28 - 00:38 मैंने एक NGO से संपर्क किया। मुझे लगा कि शायद वहाँ उसे मुझसे बेहतर इलाज और देखभाल मिल सकेगी।	 00:38 - 00:48 लेकिन... वो अपनी जगह छोड़ना नहीं चाहती थी।	 00:48 - 00:58 उस रात करीब दो बजे मेरी आँख खुली। मेरे मन में बस एक सवाल था... क्या वो सच में ठीक है?
 00:58 - 01:08 बार-बार फोन करने के बाद भी मेरा मन शांत नहीं हुआ। और रात के करीब तीन बजे... मैं अपनी बाइक लेकर उसे ढूँढ़ने निकल पड़ा।	 01:08 - 01:20 पता चला कि वो वहाँ से भाग चुकी थी। मैं आसपास के जंगल जैसे इलाकों और खाली plots में उसे ढूँढ़ता रहा।	 01:20 - 01:30 बारिश थी... थकान थी... भूख थी... लेकिन मैं बस एक ही बात कहता रहा— बेटी... वापस आ जाओ।
 01:56 - 01:38 मैं हनुमान जी के मंदिर में गया। मैंने बस एक ही प्रार्थना की... हे भगवान... मेरी बच्ची मुझे वापस मिल जाए।	 01:38 - 01:48 फिर लोगों ने बताया कि सड़क पर एक बच्ची का accident हुआ था। मैंने बहुत खोजा...	 01:48 - 01:56 और आखिरकार... मुझे वो मिल गई।
 02:32 - 02:46 मैंने उसे अपनी बाहों में लिया... मेरी बच्ची... Papa से गलती हो गई।	 02:06 - 02:18 उस दिन मैंने एक बहुत बड़ी बात सीखी। Rescue का मतलब सिर्फ किसी जानवर को एक जगह से दूसरी जगह ले जाना नहीं है।	 02:18 - 02:32 उसका डर समझना... उसका विश्वास जीतना... और उसकी सुरक्षा की जिम्मेदारी लेना भी rescue का हिस्सा है।
 क्योंकि किसी डरे हुए जानवर के लिए... shelter सिर्फ एक इमारत नहीं होता। उसे वहाँ सुरक्षित महसूस भी होना चाहिए।	करुणा के साथ जिम्मेदारी भी जरूरी है। हर जानवर का विश्वास जीतिएं।

PART III — THE PROMISE

Visakhapatnam — Feeding and Searching

While travelling for company work, he came to Visakhapatnam and remained there for more than five months during the COVID period. There he began walking long distances, sometimes around five kilometres, carrying two large bags of food mainly for street dogs and also offering food to cows when they appeared.

He noticed old dogs dying from hunger and searched online for rescuers and feeders. Some people gave him advice about how to continue the work. He fed animals twice a day when possible, spending his own money. There were times when he himself went hungry while feeding animals and even trying to help mentally challenged people living on the street.

When weakness became too great, he understood a practical truth: if he wanted to continue the next day's work, he also had to eat enough to stand and move. The wish to serve remained, but the body still required care.

THE FEMALE DOG

During regular feeding, he noticed a female dog with an amputated leg and an infection. He searched for an NGO and called one he had found online. The dog, however, did not want to leave her locality. Believing that treatment and care might be better there, he allowed her to be taken away.

That night he woke around two in the morning with a feeling of regret. The NGO was about 25 kilometres away. How could he be certain that she was receiving the care he imagined? He repeatedly called and asked for updates. He was told that the dog was all right and that a video would be shared, but he says no video came.

THE SEARCH

Eventually, overwhelmed by fear and guilt, he started his motorcycle around three in the morning and followed the location to the shelter. At the gate he saw many dogs apparently in good condition, but his eyes searched only for the one he had brought there. In grief, he cried out for his 'bachi', apologizing for having sent her far away and saying that her 'papa' had made a mistake.

The owner later explained that the dog had run away from the first day. Attempts had been made to catch her, but she escaped. Because of her disability, he could not believe that she would have travelled far. He searched the surrounding forest-like area and developing plots for days, repeatedly apologizing to her aloud and asking her to return.

He remembers searching through rain, exhaustion, hunger, and fear. At one point he fainted more than once. In a Hanuman temple, he prayed intensely for the dog's return. Some passers-by did not understand why he was there at night and dismissed him as 'pagal'.

THE LOSS

Eventually, children told him they had seen a dog moving around and had frightened her away. He asked them not to frighten innocent animals in that way. Later, lorry drivers told him that a dog matching the description had met with a road accident. After searching the area and repeatedly chanting a mantra, he found the body of the female dog.

He embraced her body, cried, and gave her a burial nearby. He returned to his rented room after roughly 36 hours of little food and almost no rest. The experience left him broken and taught him a lesson that never disappeared: trust and compassion must be accompanied by responsibility and careful verification.

WHAT SHE TAUGHT HIM

He did not conclude that every person was untrustworthy. Instead, he learned that a frightened or disabled animal may survive best when it has a place it already considers safe, or when a new shelter is introduced with patience and sensitivity. A place may become hygienic and weatherproof without suddenly frightening the animal away. A shelter is not only a building; for a frightened life, it must also become a place of trust.
