

KALU'S JOURNEY

From the loving care of the Yadav Family to Barh Animal Rescue Center

Kalu is a gentle dog who had been living openly around the Kacheri locality of Barh, under the care and protection of the Yadav family. He and his brother were familiar faces in the area, freely moving around the locality and living among the people and other dogs there. The Yadav family had initially fostered and cared for him, giving him a place where he felt safe and comfortable.

One unfortunate day, Kalu met with a severe accident involving a bike rider during the daytime. After the accident, some concerned people informed me about his condition. I reached the spot that very night after returning from NTPC, accompanied by Aryan and one of his friends.

When we found Kalu, he looked helpless, as if he were waiting for someone to come to his rescue. We first offered him a packet of lassi. Then we gave him chuda mixed with eggs. He ate with such desperation that it seemed as though he had been starving for a long time. We also gave him a painkiller and an amoxycillin tablet mixed with eggs, which he willingly took.

As it was already night and Kalu needed immediate protection, we created a temporary shelter for him in an open roadside space between two large trees. With the help of some jute sacks and a small bamboo arrangement, we made a basic resting place. We carefully moved Kalu there and then returned home.

The following day, we came back and repeated the same care. Kalu's condition had touched the hearts of local passersby, and some of them voluntarily contributed money for his treatment and food. One person donated ₹500, while another gave ₹300. These small acts of kindness became a great source of support during his difficult time.

We also informed Mr. Mohit of the Anumandaliya Veterinary Government Medical staff. He had already helped us in many rescue operations without charging any fee. After examining the situation, he told us that Kalu had a serious backbone injury and advised us to take him into our shelter so that he could receive continuous care and protection.

I then approached my shelter owner, Mr. Rajesh Singh, and requested permission to bring Kalu into the rescue center. Without hesitation, he allowed me to take Kalu in.

On the day we planned to bring Kalu to the rescue center, we discovered that he was no longer at the temporary shelter we had made for him. We immediately started searching for him. Eventually, we learned that a member of the Yadav family had taken Kalu to the Barh Veterinary Medical premises. Despite knowing his condition, Kalu was left there instead of being returned to the place where he had previously lived comfortably with his brother and the other dogs nearby.

We could not leave him behind. We brought Kalu from the veterinary premises to my rescue center using a battery-operated auto-rickshaw, commonly called a hawaii. At the center, we prepared a safe shelter for him, building a roof with bamboo and old tin/asbestos sheets so that he could stay protected from the weather.

From that day onward, Kalu has been living a simple but secure life under my custody at Barh Animal Rescue Center. His life changed from the uncertainty of the streets and the pain of a devastating accident to a life where someone is always there to care for him.

Today, Kalu has developed a beautiful bond with me. He looks at me with trust and affection, and in his own innocent way, he considers me his papa. His journey is not merely the story of an injured dog; it is a story of compassion, community support, and the promise that an abandoned or injured animal deserves another chance at life.

Kalu's journey continues—with love, care, patience, and hope.
